I first saw this when my son was reading Romeo and Juliet. His teacher would have the students first read the Act in the Illustrated book, then read the Original Shakespeare text. I tried it myself and wow..I finally easily understood what was happening in R & J! I would read each Act then read the original text. It made reading the original text so easy..once you understood what was to be happening in the scene. Same goes for Julius Caesar. It improved his understanding and grades went up. Every child should have this for a reference.

I wish it had more text, but it is great to use a reinforcement for visual learners.
