Customer Reviews

A great read. This one starts with the discovery of two bodies. A mother and daughter. They are found in a cave in the Black Mountains outside the town of Cooksville in far North Queensland. Both are naked. The Black Mountains are a sacred place to the Aborigines of Australia. Many have died within those mountains which are crisscrossed with caves and tunnels. Some people went into the mountain and were never seen again. It's a place full of bats, snakes and death. It's a place none of the locals will approach. The police led by Inspector Peter Martin and Senior Constable Binda Spencer are the first on the scene. The tour guide who reported the bodies is an Aboriginal named Bobby Gum. Gum has taken folks on this same tour many times and nothing like this has ever happened. All it took was a missing little girl and Bobby finding both her and the bodies in a cave. Inspector Martin and Spencer locate the bodies, call all the appropriate police and forensics people. They also notify Detective Inspector Maurice Keller who will ultimately be in charge of the case. The case leads them to Merinda Jerome. Jerome is a stunningly beautiful woman of mixed Aboriginal and white heritage. She's the widow of a husband who died and whose body has never been found. Jerome is extremely wealthy. Jerome is a successful business woman with a lovely home guarded by two trained German Shepherds. She's also a woman who's friends with attorney Yana Gibson. Gibson is a friend, part time lover and fighting partner of Ben Hood. A Ben Hood who Yana knows will be able to keep Merinda safe. So begins another great read by Lindsay.
